

Training People Together!

The NMIT WELL Programme

Funded by the Department of Education, Science and Training, the WELL Programme enables organisations with broad communications needs to access a generous government subsidy to help fund vocationally based training in the workplace.

The training provider, NMIT, is a long standing and highly respected provider of the WELL Programme with specialist expertise in the delivery of workplace communications skills and language and literacy support. NMIT has established working relationships with members of the Plenty Food Group including the Original Juice Company, Inghams Chickens and Chiquita Mushrooms.

Communications training in the workplace enables employees to participate fully in the workplace and understand what is required of them and how their efforts contribute to the achievement of strategic objectives. Some skills needs that have been addressed at other Food Processing sites through the NMIT WELL Programme include:

- Maintaining accreditation (eg ISO9000, HACCP)
- Reducing tensions due to culturally diversity
- Improving leadership skills of team leaders and supervisors
- Improving communication between shifts/departments/workers
- Improving language, literacy and numeracy skills
- Improving negotiation and problem solving
- Improving documentation skills
- Increasing worker participation
- Reducing resistance to change
- Improving GMP practices
- Food safety training
- Increasing productivity
- Improving teamwork
- Improving customer service
- Increasing quality awareness
- Increasing safety awareness
- Introducing new technology

The NMIT WELL Programme places an experienced and qualified trainer at your worksite for one or more days per week over 42 weeks. It is your decision what and how much training is delivered. The training is customised using your policies, procedures and workplace examples and accommodates shift arrangements, employee release constraints and peak operation times.
